

The Healer Jesus Lopez No. 12

A gentle breeze played with Akiko's hair as she nervously approached the door of spiritual healer Jesus Lopez. For months, she had suffered from inexplicable abdominal pains, and no medical treatment seemed to bring relief. Taking hold of the door knocker with all her courage, she knocked on the door.

With a warm smile, healer Jesus Lopez opened the door and welcomed her in. "You must be Akiko," he said with a calm but firm voice. "Please, come in."

So began their first encounter. After drinking a cup of hot tea and discussing her symptoms, it was time for her individual session.

Akiko was allowed to lie down on the lounge as Jesus activated the crystal bed. Seven clear mountain crystals illuminated in radiant colours of the chakras over her supine body onto her energy centres. It was her first session with a spiritual healer, and she had never heard of the crystal bed before. Jesus explained, “We use the crystal light in addition to rebalancing your chakras and cleansing your aura while I work with my hands on you.” And although it was just light, she felt warmth over her chakras after a short time, and dark clouds seemed to dissolve in her aura. Jesus placed his hands on her body, and Akiko felt a deeper relaxation.

Jesus entered into prayer and a deep trance as he focused on Akiko's abdomen. He could already sense a dark energy over her abdomen from her aura, extending into her abdominal cavity. With slow movements, he pushed the dark clouds aside and received additional information. She was one of those people who processed and suppressed a lot through the stomach. The phrase “swallowing the anger” was appropriate for her.

During the first few minutes, she felt her eyes flickering, deeper relaxation, and entering a light half-sleep. And this, although healer Jesus Lopez had not yet placed his hands on her body and only worked on her aura.

Just before his hands touched her belly, her stomach began to make noises. He reassured her, saying, "It's just tension in the intestinal walls, not air. Nothing embarrassing will happen." After a brief nervous smile, she felt her intestines continue to move. It felt as if the intestines were in the wrong position and were moving back to their basic position. "If you feel any pain or discomfort, please let me know," said Jesus compassionately as he focused on her energy fields.

Jesus was entirely in his element as a healer. This was again one of those sessions where much could be released. With his hands, he could sense the approximate age of the energies. In her case, he felt that the energies had built up over decades. Normally, a disease would have had to manifest itself, but something seemed to have been done right, so the disease had not broken out. Suddenly, Jesus felt an unusually heavy energy. He had felt a few layers of energy deeper and pushed the crystal bed back for now. She would need the space above her.

She had a stored shock in her energy system. He determined the stored origin of her illness in her system. In a moment of deep concentration, Jesus gently pressed on a specific point on her abdomen, opening a gateway to long-suppressed pain and suffering. At that moment, Akiko felt her stomach begin to vibrate, and tears she had suppressed erupted from her like a volcano. From this point on, unprocessed childhood emotions surged up, and tears flowed from her eyes. She held her hands over her eyes in shame and slightly raised her upper body. Tears of liberation ran down her cheeks.

Jesus let go and distanced himself from her. He didn't need to do anything more. Self-healing had been initiated, and energies and tears flowed. He handed her a tissue and gave her the time she needed. Through his reassuring energy field, she was able to let herself fall better. Whether she told the story behind the outburst or not was entirely up to her. Some people are ready to mention the backgrounds, and others require several days to process the experiences.

He rejoiced with her over the healing she had experienced, and the story behind it played only a minor role. Healing was the most important thing. With a smile on his lips, he continued his work as a healer, knowing that his abilities were destined to influence not only the moment but the entire life story of a person.

In the following days, Akiko reflected on her first experiences with a healer. She realized that healing didn't always have to be just physical, but also had a spiritual and emotional dimension. With a new sense of life and understanding of herself, she turned to life with new confidence, ready to embrace the challenges that fate might bring her with open arms.
